In her spoken word performances artist Nora Turato invokes precise observations of everyday life. By the artistically molded speaking of her texts, by rhythm and melody of her speech Nora Turato accentuates the urgency of her sociocultural themes, echoing the here and now. In doing so her performances resemble a tour de force, pressing, provocative and right on target. In videos and sound recordings Turato preserves, edits and remixes her live appearances. At this juncture the essential dichotomy of performance and documentation is addressed, simultaneously the development of a self-sufficient format constitutes as an artistic process in itself.
